It's alive!...

It feels like a decade since the nation's leisure sector was forced to close its doors...

But it's finally time to go back to the theatre!

Presented by producer, director and lifelong cinema devotee Perry J. O'Halloran - CineMan is a four-part documentary series combining factual storytelling and warmhearted humour on a mission to bring audiences closer to the glow of their favourite silver screens whilst reminding us of everything there is to love about London's greatest independent cinemas, the hardworking people behind them and how loyal cinethusiasts everywhere can continue to show their support.

This time, it's personal...

Independent cinemas are home to some of our favourite memories. For every nervous first date, there's an unforgettable singalong. For every tearful roll of the credits, there's a climactic finale to inspire change in our own lives.

But as well as the stories on screen, each theatre has more stories than have ever been told.

CineMan will hear from faithful employees, loyal members and adoring patrons to learn the history behind each historic building, the legends they've been built on, the unbelievable stories we continue to tell and the lasting traditions that will live on for generations to come.
